Lisabel Gay's Column

Frank Gay was the dinner guest of his longtime friends, Miss Jennie Prichard and Mrs. Emily Courser in Henniker on Saturday. They have sold their house and expect soon to move into another house they own in Henniker. The ladies seem to be quite well.

Sometime ago Tommy Hines of Windsor Mt. Camp, invited Frank to visit his camp. So Frank went up Friday, which happened to be Mr. Hine's birthday. Frank had a most enjoyable time watching the boys swimming and other exercises. Their days routine seemed wonderful to a 81 year old farmer's boy whose boyhood days were so very different. It seems there are 103 boys and about 140 in the whole family including the camp nurse, Mrs. Ann Smith, one of Hillsboro's best nurses. Frank said it was his calling day as he made so many calls on the way but it strikes me like any other day. (Continued on Page 7)

Dig Deeper, Senator Mead!

by James Wechsler — from the Progressive

JAMES WECHSLER, the former chief of the Washington bureau of PM, is now on the Washington staff of the New York Evening Post. He is covering the daily hearings of the Mead Committee's investigation into war profiteering.

"DAMYANKEE PLOT"

Rep May's conduct seems not to have injured him politically in his own district. The New York Herald-Tribune queried editors in May's district. They reported that, if anything, the Mead Committee disclosures have strengthened May's reelection chances. The St. Louis Post-Dispatch sent a staff correspondent into the district. He wrote:

"Whatever the Mead Committee in Washington may say or prove against Rep. May, the people of his district are not going to be very much impressed. Already there is talk here in Prestonburg, Ky., that these Washington stories about May's taking money from an Illinois ring of war contractors are just 'another one of those damyankee plots.'"

COME! COME! COME!

Washington, D. C.
It was 2 January, 1944, as they say in the Army. Three generals and three colonels boarded a train in Washington's Union Station. Their destination was New York. The mission was "Operation Pierre."

All of them carried formal military travel-orders. Gen. Alden H. Waitt, now chief of the Army Chemical Warfare Service, and the other high-ranking brass knew where they were going. The orders read:

"It is directed as necessary in the military service that you proceed on or about 3 January 1944 from Washington, D. C., to New York, New York, on temporary duty for one day in connection with chemical warfare research and development, and upon completion of this duty that you return to your proper station."

On the night of the second the contingent led by Gen. Waitt, defying wintry winds, made its landing at the swank Hotel Pierre in New York to attend the sumptuous wedding party being thrown by one Murray Garsson in honor of his bride-to-be daughter.

According to all available evidence the party was terrific. In addition to the military dignitaries the scene was graced by Rep. Andrew Jackson May, venerable chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee. There are indications in our non-military annals, moreover, that the expedition was long and strenuous. The hotel records indicated that neither the generals nor the Congressman checked out until late the following afternoon.

The immediate effects of the gathering were reported as not too severe but the real morning after came 31 months later. By that time probably all the guests had forgotten that a young photographer had immortalized the proceedings, including a fatherly squeeze administered by Rep. May to the beautiful bride and a romantic lapsitting episode involving Gen. William N. Porter and the bride's sister. But the pictures turned up in the gray dawn of a Senate investigation.

The camera's findings had more than academic interest because Murray Garsson, it developed, was a large-scale war profiteer with a shady past and a dubious future. The generals and the colonels ran the Chemical Warfare Service which handed the Garsson network its fattest war contracts. The Congressman from Kentucky lobbied furiously for this string of Illinois war plants dominated by two New Yorkers; simultaneously he served as "resident agent" for the Cumberland Lumber Company, which got $48,000 from the Garsson ring for lumber that was never delivered. Checks for $18,000 of that amount carried May's endorsement.

So the pictures of the Pierre festivities, described as "unfortunate" by one distinguished general who wishes he had stood in bed, became a legitimate chapter in any photographic history of World War II. Close students of military affairs may also recall that this assault-by-night on New York occurred just a few weeks before the Anzio landing and other major military adventures. None of the participants in the Pierre offensive have so far claimed they were helping to open a second front.

To those of us who write for a living the picture-story was something of a blow, since it told more dramatically than thousands of words the torrid tale unfolded by Committee headed by Sen. James Mead of New York. But in any case, any correspondent who spent any time in war-time Washington (Continued on Page 2)

CANDLELIGHT CEREMONY OF INTEREST HERE

Miss Dorothy Elizabeth Rickels of Geneva N. Y., and Joseph Johnson Holmes Jr. of Lynn, Mass. were united in marriage Aug. 10 at the Methodist Church in Peterboro. The wedding ceremony was performed by the double ring service held by candlelight Roy M. Knox of Lynn, was best man, and the matron of honor was Mrs. Velma R. Hall, sister of the bride.

The organist was Mrs. Winslow Sawyer from Braintree, Mass., the bride's brother Oscar Rickels of Auburn N.Y. gave the bride away. Ushers were H. Bertram Hall, from Geneva, N. Y., cousin of the bride and her nephew Edward Rickels Jr. of Albany, N. Y.

The bride wore the traditional gown of white satin, white flowers in her hair, and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and white chrysanthemums. The matron of honor also in white, wore yellow flowers in her hair, and carried a nosegay of old fashioned flowers.

A formal reception held at the church was followed by an informal buffet supper at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Hall in Antrim.

On the buffet table at which the wedding cake was served, the tablecloth was an heirloom of the bride's great-grandmother. About 40 guests were present at this reception, mostly from New York, Penn., and Mass.

The newlyweds are on a honeymoon trip this week to Ottawa, Canada, but will return to Antrim for the weekend. After Sept. 1st they will be at home, to their friends, at 22 Archer St., Lynn, Mass.

Many of the out of town wedding guests will visit this week with Mr. and Mrs. Milton Hall, at their home here. Among the houseguests will be Miss Helen Buckley, Miss Marion Kenney, both of Geneva, N. Y., Mr. and Mrs. Oscar F. Rickels, and their daughter, Barbara from Auburn, N. Y., Edward Rickels, Jr., and H. Bertram Hall.

will not be entirely shocked by the disclosures. So far Rep. May has taken most of the rap for the grim Garsson performance; while he clearly merited his varsity "G," it would be a pity if the exposure of the gentleman from Kentucky overshadowed the role of the chair-borne infantry that dominated procurement policy throughout the war.

The truth is that bigger corporations with better names than Erie Basin did not require the services of helpful Congressmen when they came to Washington offering their production—all for the war effort at fancy prices. It is an open secret in this town that the big-boys accomplished most of their objectives by placing their own executives in uniform. They dictated their own contract terms by "negotiating" with their own men who had simply changed their clothing for the duration of hostilities. As the Garssons sadly pointed out, they learned about corporate organization from the Bethlehem Steel.

The Garsson epic has a special underworld flavor. Murray Garsson is an oldtime playmate of such colorful characters as Al Capone, Owney Madden, and "Dutch" Schultz. His brother Henry was fired from the Internal Revenue Service after being tried (and acquitted) for extortion. Benjamin Franklin Fields, who allegedly tried to buy off the Mead Committee's chief investigator, is a Lewisburg (penitentiary) alumnus.

Back in 1941 Henry Garsson got a $3,000,000 contract from the Army Chemical Service when his only asset was a borrowed letterhead. With that happy document he interested two Illinois manufacturers who owned some real property. They built a nice network. They paid themselves duplicate salaries, padded their expense accounts, threw gaudy parties to celebrate their E-awards (obtained through the persevering efforts of the gentleman from Kentucky). They put the finger on officers who resisted their activities. They even won the attentive ear of Secretary of War Patterson (then Undersecretary).

Patterson's role is noteworthy. The righteous judge, testifying with a red face and an impatient manner, insisted quite convincingly that he had no tie-up with this sordid munitions racket. He didn't. But he did take a surprisingly large amount of time from his weighty labors to concern himself with the real and imagined woes of the Garssons.

The reason was not commercial. Patterson was fighting for a labor draft. He needed Congressional help. Congressman May was similarly exerting himself to enact that legislation. So when May called ed Patterson to plead for an "E" and other tiny favors for the letter-conscious Garssons, Patterson responded.

The sequence is slightly memorable in view of the altruistic verbiage in which the campaign for a labor draft was waged. Patterson's motives were no doubt impeccable; but the Army is not too selective in its choice of friends.

The ironies in the Garsson exposure pile up swiftly. On July 19 at 11:50 a.m., the Mead Committee issued a subpoena for Rep. May who had stubbornly defied polite invitations to testify. Reporters rushed over to the House to watch the serving of the subpoena. But there was nearly a four-hour delay. The Congressman was toiling feverishly on the House floor, battling to preserve military control of the atomic-energy program. Under sacred House rules he could not be molested as long as he remained inside the chamber.

So through a long Congressional afternoon a legislator whose ties with a profiteer-ring had been unfolded for nearly three weeks on the other side of Capitol Hill continued to play the role of leading statesman, and heavy thinker. This time he wasn't playing with 4.2 mortar shells; he had the atom-bomb in his hands. His colleagues listened reverently as he spoke. The only episode that disturbed the tranquillity of the afternoon was a strange Freudian slip by Mr. May when he began one of his orations with the phrase: "Your honor..." Everybody laughed and he amended his remarks.

As in any exposure of these dimensions the shots begin to fly wildly. It is now revealed that a young Captain named Joseph Garsson had the benevolent interest of Rep. May when he found himself in a nasty court-martial proceeding. May's intervention was admittedly striking; so was the concern which officials of the Chemical Warfare Service manifested for other phases of Garsson's military career.

But the headlines were cruel and misleading as far as the Garsson youth is concerned. His offense was refusal to lead his men into a death trap; the officer who succeeded him was not required to carry out the suicidal mission. The Garsson boy wasn't warming himself in a Pentagon chair; he had literally fought his way into combat over the objections of some of his father's friends. He is plainly one of the innocent victims of the present uproar.

Meanwhile, the dramatic climax of the whole business—May's appearance before the committee—is still to be enacted as this is written. Legal aides had been unable to protect him from the committee's grilling, but medical science won him a reprieve; his physician testified that his heart wouldn't take it and there is no disposition here to question that explanation. But the Committee is ghoulishly awaiting his recovery. Probably the only way May can ultimately avoid the witness stand is to quit his Congressional seat. That could happen. Many men would prefer the peace and quiet of the Kentucky hills to the Mead Committee hotseat.

The political dynamite in the Mead probe is self-evident. Republicans and Democrats alike (using slightly different theses) are preparing to exploit the disclosures.

Jim Mead is posing for the camera as a gangbuster who makes Tom Dewey look small-time. The Republicans will say all these revelations prove how dirty life was in the Roosevelt era. My own guess is that the true war-profit scandal cut across party lines; that many Republicans and Democrats alike, wearing the uniform of the U. S. Army, retained their loyalties to the corporation back home as they carried out the Henniker, Antrim and Bennington members will be members of the Hillsboro unit.

More than 100 men in the four towns mentioned have already joined the fast moving social and fraternal order which is well known throughout the United States and has done much for every community in which it has an order. The local committee, Andrew Normandin, Albert Paro, George and James Barrett are proud of the accomplishments of the past few weeks since the idea was first conceived here and The Gables, owned by Dr. Arthur Muir, has been rented and will be furnished shortly. A big initiation meeting will be held in the Opera House in hte near future for candidates.

Organizations of this type are an asset to any community and shows a healthy condition. Composed of young men who have initiative and progress, it reveals a healthy condition for social improvement, keeps the youth off the street, their minds on worthwhile projects and endeavors and gives them the social life they need most in this jittery world.

While the children of this age play with their toys today, the old men play with their memories of yesterday, and although the Loyal Order of Moose desires youths, it also has its place for the more mature gentlemen of the old school and they are welcomed. It does not desire applicants who simply wish to be joiners and then stay away from meetings and social activities of the organization, but it does desire he-blooded men of action who wish to improve their social status and be friendly. You get out of a thing just what you put into it, and if you become a Moose you will surely get your moneys worth with interest and be a power for good in your community and everywhere you go.

OLD TIMER WRITES OF EARLY BASEBALL GREATS

We are indebted to William E. Gibney, now of Keene, N. H., one of the first baseball players in Hillsboro, who writes as follows:

The old time ball players mentioned in last week's Messenger did not include Arthur Watson, a fine ball player and a grand man at all times.

The article also brought to my mind the names of some of Hillsboro's opponents in Antrim: Rob Shea, six feet two inches tall, who could take a ball out of the sky at second base; Stub Little, a pitcher and good; Andy Cuddihy, in left field and Richard Goodell in center could throw a ball over the moon; and Harry Chamberlain, known as Fiddler, one of the mainstays of the Antrim team, a pitcher who could play any position.

Pearl Wilson of Bennington, was a catcher who could fake a foul tip and get away with it. Harry Ross, also of Bennington, was a good pitcher.

One thing not mentioned about Van was his wide mouthed grin when facing a batter. We used to tell him not to swallow the ball, for we didn't have many extra ones in those days.

Scott Emery, a fine and honest umpire, now lives in Peterboro. I well remember a game at Tilton, when he drove a crowd off the diamond with a bat.

In the late 1870's, I played against a Wilton boys team in Hirly's pasture. Jimmie Dillon was captain of the Wilton team and I was captain of the Lyndeboro team. The average age of the players was thirteen to fifteen years.

I caught my last game about twenty years ago for the Windsor Mt. Camp boys, playing against Hillsboro. We won with Tom Hines pitching.

I passed my 80th birthday, Saturday, July 20, 1946.

... the beverages of moderation

Wheat is needed to feed the world's hungry people. During the present emergency, here are three ways in which we can all co-operate with the President's Famine Emergency Committee:

1. Save and share wheat and fat products... Go light on all foods that take wheat, fats and oils—save breads, macaroni, cakes, cookies, pastries and deep-fried foods. Use drippings for pan-frying. Save salad oil—use boiled dressing.
2. Buy and serve more plentiful foods... Balance diets with the more plentiful foods, such as potatoes, fresh fruits and vegetables.
3. Waste NO food... Dress up today's leftovers for tomorrow. Make every crust count with melba toast, crumb-toppings, bread puddings and stuffings. Take no more than you can eat. Clean your plate. Turn in unusable fat salvage promptly.

expressions of good will during the time I was laid up. Little things like those make life worth the living.

Also had a nice visit from Forest Fire Chief Young of Amherst. It has been a quiet summer for the chief. Not many fires and what were were not bad. The chief has a fine system now in my district. Some one in North Weare sent me a newspaper clipping and short note but no name. The clipping was about a fatal shooting in some Massachusetts city. Boys with .22 rifles.

I would give a good deal to see that Black Panther that has been seen in this town many times, also in Mont Vernon, Milford and Temple. The people who have seen this animal are responsible people and know their wild animals. Hope I see it myself some day. Not far from my home.

Man in Winchendon, Mass., wants a good beagle hound. Got one?

Here is a man that has a Remington 20 gauge auto shotgun like new. Are you interested?

A month or six weeks' old fawn was found in the road between Amherst and Mont Vernon by Mr. Russell of the Russell Farm, Mont Vernon. The deer had been hit by a car and it was well covered with bruises. We left it at the Farm to be fed and nursed back to health. Tinfoil honor roll for this week is Mary and Susan Bristow of Greenfield, N. H., and Fronce Dunklee of Fitchburg, Mass.

The auto traffic is back to pre-war heights. Sunday the roads were lined with cars and many new ones were noted.

Well the primaries are over and what a relief. Now for the big time in November.

Don't forget the AKC Sanctioned all breed dog show to be held by the Profile Kennel Club at the Rockingham Race track grounds Sept. 15th. Bring your dogs, get a prize and meet real doggy people.

According to Ed Towne the Seashore Warden at Hampton Beach there were 1500 lobster traps washed up in the last storm.

If you see a trap in a pond set for pout or snapping turtle, don't disturb unless you have the O.K. of the local Warden. There is a stiff fine for meddling with a state set trap of any kind.

Supt. Trow of Mont Vernon Game farm tells us that he lost the little white pheasant hen by a skunk. Before she died she had laid 72 eggs of which 68 were fertile. She was mated to a ringneck male. He hopes some of the chicks will be at least one half white.

Have we got a mess of western coyotes here. Looks like it. A poultry man in Mont Vernon reports that three animals larger than a fox and very bold got a lot of his chickens one night. He knows they were not foxes. Then a woman in West Wilton who knows her animals says she saw one at her farm a few weeks ago. It was no dog she said.

Well folks, I am still enjoying a forced vacation. Sitting in a chair with your feet higher than your head is no cinch. I have been out and walked around some but don't feel much like taking a nice hike. My outside work has been all done by my daughter, Miss Nancy. Speaking of driving a car, this young lady has got me stopped a mile. She has driven me many thousands of miles on back as well as trunk lines and I still maintain she is better than I ever was at driving.

Both Greenville and Milford Fish and Game clubs are to stage carnivals some time in August. No real dates set as yet.

Walter R. Peterson, the well known sportsman of Nashua, writes the following:

"When a salmon hits, he strikes your soul. He will leap, dart, rush and roll. Whether you're flush or on the dole you'll worry not, till you take his toll."

Yes, we are still taking pout and planting them in other ponds. This work is being done by my two daughters, Mrs. Phillips and Miss Nancy.

We had a call the other day from the owner of the Marshall Pet Farm, RFD 1, Nashua. He is (Continued on Page 7)

Some one over in London is sending me the "Mail" edited daily in London, England. A snappy sheet and very interesting. We see by the papers, that the Nashua Police are doing a good job taking slingshots away from the boys of that city. These weapons in the hands of a small boy are as dangerous to wild life as a 10 gauge shotgun.

Trout fishermen report that they have seen many and large flocks of ruffed grouse. This is good news to the bird hunters. I guess these favorite game birds are well on their way back.

Speaking of the thrill of a life time, Robert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Foster, Wilton, got that thrill

Two more cases of boats stolen from ponds in my District. I would give a week's pay to be able to nail one of these birds.

Last week was the worst seen for a long time. More animals and birds of all sorts were killed on the trunk lines by cars. Guess they are not keeping within the 35 miles an hour law.

This week we had a nice letter from Hon. Andrew L. Felker, Commissioner of Agriculture. He calls my attention to Laws of 1942, Chapter 442, Sec. II, Trespassing of Live Stock. This will answer the questions of a man in a nearby town who is having damage to his gardens by stray cattle.

Speaking of sunsets we had some beautiful ones many nights last week.

Ever see a copy of the West Coast Sportsman edited at San Francisco, Cal. A snappy little sheet. By the tone of that magazine those on the west coast are sure conservation minded.

O yes, we took three more turtles from Osgood pond last week, making the total up to over 350 lbs. Allen Foster and his son-in-law are doing most of the trapping.

What is a Conservationist? Here is a woman who says she is a great lover of wild life and in the next sentence she brags about how smart her cat is "Why one day that cat brought into the yard three robins and a thrush." Smart cat.

Speaking of cooperation. One day last week I was laid up and could not attend to a complaint so I called in Chief Drayton of the home town. Did he cooperate? Well I'll say he did 100%. Had the case tied up inside of an hour. Thanks Jack.

You know I wish that every one who is cutting off our forests and putting nothing back would read the Govt. Miscellaneous Publication No. 600 entitled "Water and our Forests." It's worth reading and might stop some of this awful waste. You can get your copy from the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture Forestry Service, Washington, D.C.

Had a nice call the other day from Supervisor Cheney of the Fish and Game Dept. Office, Concord. Home at Farmington, N. H. "Hop" is making good.

Thanks a lot for the cards and looking for all unusual birds and small animals.

Last week we had a large number of requests for all sorts of dogs, small, large or indifferent. What have you got?

Many people have a large number of small kittens, sorry cannot use but could use a few long haired kittens or bob-tailed kittens. The common kind are out for the present.

The rain over the week-end stopped the fire ban threat which has been hanging over us for a week.

Summer campers on small ponds or lakes should report in at once the appearance of a strange boat. Seven boats have been stolen from small ponds in my district and many from ponds outside of my district.

If your summer visitors are from out of state and bring up an outboard motor, be sure to tell them about the laws regarding the same. All outboards must be licensed, the price being $2. Fine without is $100. Inspectors from the Public Service Commission are patrolling our lakes and ponds, so play it safe.

This week's column is being written by my all around helper, Miss Nancy, who feeds the stocks, tends the hornpout traps, turtle traps, and takes the skunks out of your cellar. She is my official chauffeur and general handy man.

GRANITE STATE GARDENER
by J. R. HEPLER

So many people are worried about what to do with their tomato plants. Should they tie them up on stakes or on strings? Should they build a rack to put them on? Should they mulch them with hay or paper or should they let nature take its course and just let them grow and spread out as they please? And I cannot answer these questions for you.

In my own garden I let them grow as they please, although when I visit some of my gardening friends who grow the Field Station or Minute Man varieties of tomatoes pruned to one stem and tied to a string or stake I always resolve that next year I will do likewise. When the next year comes I am always too busy. As a matter of fact you get more tomatoes, you get them just as early with less care if you do not prune them, but the tomatoes will not be quite as nice. Often when the fruit is right on the ground, various insects especially wireworms eat their way into the tomatoes and spoil them. This will not happen when they are tied to stakes. They seem to ripen a little more evenly and with less blemish on stakes than when lying on the ground. In fact most of the tomatoes grown for the fancy market are stake-grown tomatoes, but variety has a lot to do with it, too.

Field Station or Marglobe may be staked but varieties like Earliana or determinates like Victor or Early Chatham are not suitable for this type of culture.

Remember that leaves are very important to the tomato plant. The leaves manufacture all the food that is used by the plant. If you wish to prune your tomatoes take out the suckers which you find growing in the axil of the leaf and the main stem. Tie the plant loosely to a stake or a string so that you do not strangle the plant. You can use rags or heavy string or raffia to do the tying.

In dry, warm soils it may be advantageous to mulch with hay, straw, manure, or lawn clippings. If the plants show a tendency to turn yellow under the mulch add a little nitrate fertilizer.

Mrs. Bertha Pierce of Pepperill, Mass., spent last week with her friends, Miss Katherine Duseau of Newman-St.

Arthur B. Corey, Deputy Sheriff, his daughter, Mrs. Virginia Ramsay and Charles Robinson, all of Concord, Mass., called on Frank Gay on Sunday.

Miss Helen Brown from Long Lane School, Middletown, Conn., and Miss Carolyn Allison, Monticello, N. Y., while on a trip to Quebec, stayed Sunday night with Mrs. Nellie Mellen, called on Mrs. Peaslee and me.

Mrs. John Fuller (Ada Read) of North Weare, has been visiting her brother, Irving and Mrs. Read, for a few days.

Dr. Lewell and Mrs. Walker visited their relatives the Atwood-Harveys, a few days last week. Dr. Walker served overseas at North Africa, Sicily, Italy, France, and in Austria. When he returned to Boston, he took several courses in medicine to bring him up to date in the care and treatment of his civilian patients before going to their home in Middlebury, Vt.

Miss Pierce, who is staying with her aunt, Mrs. Brower, at Loon lake, brought a fellow teacher of hers from Waterbury, Conn., in to see me on Sunday. She is Miss Alice Houston, who was in the sixth grade of the training school when I was given a long assignment in that grade.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Harrington, Miss Nora Ashford, and John Mossia are spending their vacations at Bonnebeg lake near Berwick, Maine.

Long ago a story was told which has often been repeated. A little girl living in Henniker, was talking to her dolly about behavior. She said, "Now Dolly, if you are good you will go to Heaven, but if you are bad you will go to Hillsboro Bridge". I don't quite understand the dig at Hillsboro, but if there ever was any feeling between the two towns, the amount of sympathy expressed because of the bad weather they drew on Saturday, ought to have cured their trouble. They had some very fine floats and it seemed a shame they had to get wet.
